Dr. Tanner, the Faster, Is Going to Bury Himself.

Binnett.

The celebrated Dr. Henry S. Tanner, who nine years ago made himself a forty days wonder by trying to starve himself, is shout to come to the front sgain and set the people agog by getting into a coffin and being buried under ground. It was early in 1850 that Dr. William A. Hammond offered a certain Mollio Fancher, of Brooklys, who claimed to have lived fourteen years without food, $1,000 if she would consent to be watched for one month, and not take any food during that period. Dr. Tanner, living at the time in Minneapolia, saw the challenge, and offered to perform the superiment. Dr. Hammond agreed, and on the 28th day of June, 1850, at noon, began a fast which lasted, not thirty, but forty, days. He lost ten pounds of fiesh during this period, but did not suffer in besith. He took to food whatever, but drank all the water a wanted. On the morning of the fortight day he sat with a peach in his hand, pecking it at a few minutes before noom. At 28 celeck be at the peach, which was followed by other fruit and more substantial food. The experiment was performed to the satisfaction of the watchers, and Dr. Tanner wou the $1,000.

Taumer has experimented upon himself and to enable him to gain every advan-tage. One of the comatose condition is throwing the tongue into the gul-let, so that a radi-cal change of the circulation of the blood occurs, the conditions thus effected being similar to those just before hirth, where there is no respiration.

Bir Charles Martin Wade, governor general in the Labore district of the British empire in India, has given a statement of the resurcitation of a Brahmin fakir who had been thus burled. Sir Charles had not seen the interment, bus winnessed the resurrection. He accompanied an Indian primo, Runjest Singh, who testified to the burial, to the building in which the body had been inclosed. The only door to the sepaleber had been closed with hard, dried mud, the padiock of which had been sealed with the private seal of Runjeet Singh. The seal, which was found unbroken, was taken off, the door unlocked, and the place where the fakir was buried entered by Runjeet Singh, Sir Charles Wade and a servant, who descended with a torch to the cell where the body had been pixed in a wooden box, sealed and locked. The writer thus describes what followed:

"On being opened by the servant we saw a figure inclosed in a bag of white linen, fastened by a string over the head. The servant lifted the body out, and Runjeet Singh and I descended further into the cell, which was so small that we were only able to sit on the floor in front of the body, and a close to it that our hands and knees came in contact with it.

"The servant then began pouring warm A TTORNEY AT LAW, PIANOTUNER, LEAVE ORDERS AT MAR getts Bros., Whale St., and 156 E. Third So with it.

"The servant then began pouring warm water over the figure, but to satisfy myself against fraud I tore open the bag, which looked midslewed, as though it had been long buried. The legs and arms were stiff and shriveled, the face full, and the head reclining on the shoulder like that of a corpse. I then summoned medical gentlemen, who came and inspected the holy critically, but could disinspected the body critically, but could dis-cover no pulsation of the heart, the temple "The servant then recommenced bathless

"The servant then recommenced bathing him with hot water and gradually relaxing the legs and arms from the rigid state in which they were contracted, Runjeet Singh taking the right and I the left leg, to aid by friction in restoring them to their proper action, during which time the servant placed a hot wheaten cake about an inch thick on the top of the ball, renewing it two or three times. top of the ball, renewing it two or three times. He then pulled out of the ears and nostrils the wax and cotton with which they were stopped, not, after great exertion, opened his mouth 1 / inserting the point of a knife between his teath, and, while holding the faws open with his left hand, drew the tongue for ward with his right, in the course of which the tongue flaw back several times to its curved position upward, in which it had originally been, to close the guillet. He next rabbed the cyclids a while with clarified butter until he succeeded in opening them, when the eyes appeared quite motionless and glassy. "After the hot cake had been applied the third time to the top of the head, the body was violently convulsed, the nextrile became inflated when respiration ensued, and the the wax and cotton with which they were DHESSMAKER, PERFORMAS, was violently convulsed, the nostrile became inflated when respiration ensued, and the limbe began to assume a natural fullness; but the pulsation was yet faintly perceptible. The servant then put some butter on the tongue and made him swallow it. A few minutes after the eyeballs became dilated and assumed their natural color, when the fakir, recognizing Runjeet Singh sitting close to him, articulated in a hollow, septichral tone, scarcely suddible: 'Do you believe me now!' Runjeet Singh replied in the affirmative, and invested the fakir with an elaborate pearl necklace, costry you'd braceless, pieces. pearl necklace, costly gold bracelets, pie of silk, musicus, shawls, etc."
